Make room for a response

“What would you enjoy doing together today?”

“Would you like music, a story, or a little quiet?”

“What do you like about this?”

“Would you like to tell me more?”

“Is there something you want me to understand?”

“Would you like company, or some space?”

You can share something about yourself instead of asking another question. You can also sit together without making conversation the task.

These are optional conversation ideas, not a communication treatment or memory assessment. Respect the person’s preferences and right to decline.

An invitation I would like to try:

Something the person would like more—or less—of:

General education; not medical advice, diagnosis, treatment, or a clinical care plan.

First edition · October 9, 2026 · AI-assisted drafting and source checks; not independently clinically reviewed.